The Resident Action Project is a network led by people who have experienced housing injustice. Together we’re building power to change state policy through storytelling, organizing, and civic action.

As private market rents skyrocket and families are struggling to stay housed, we need a massive investment in affordable housing to meaningfully address the issue. The only way we are going to get that is by building a movement led by residents of affordable homes, non-profit housing providers, and advocates who’ve experienced housing injustice.

The Resident Action Project integrates tangible community-led organizing work with leadership development. Every day, we’re building a housing movement where the folks most impacted by the issues are the ones developing and leading the solutions to solve them. These issues do not exist in a vacuum. We know that too many of the people with lived experience are people of color, people who identify as LGBTQ+, people with disabilities, and single parent families, and housing is one part of a larger system of oppression that we hope to address in our organizing work.

By becoming a Resident Action Project friend and member, you will gain organizing, advocacy, and policy skills. We are connected to the Washington Low Income Housing Alliance, where we have access to the resources we need to bring about justice to all Washington-ians. We welcome anyone with a lived experience and non-profit staff!

Join our Facebook Group: https://www.facebook.com/groups/residentactionproject/
Signup for our action alerts & mailing list on the RAP website at https://residentactionproject.org/
Contact the community organizer at WA Low Income Housing Alliance: Kiki, kikis@wliha.org